MILK PRICES HIGHER HERE

Farmers Charge Advance to Increased Cost of Feed for Cattle.

DARTER GIVES HIS VIEWS

assigned by local dairymen

The Clover Leaf Dairy company raised its retail prices on Oct. 16. Milk is selling at 10 cents a pint and cream at 40 cents a pint. The raise in prices is attributed by officials to the decrease in production, due to the high cost of feedstuff.

the high cost of feedstuff.

O. L. Darter, of the Clover Leaf company, said Thursday: "Local dairymen have been obliged to raise their prices because the farmers have raised the wholesale prices. The farmer agks more for milk because it costs him more to produce it. The difficulty of securing labor and the high cost of feedstuff have necessitated this. Our prices have consetated this, Our prices have consequently gone up too. To these causes must be added the fact that we have to pay more for labor than ever before. The loss of bottles is one of the greatest handicaps in the dairy business. The expense of repairing machinery also figures in the cost of production to a large extent."

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

If you combined the curative proper-ties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 21/2 ounces of linex, pour it into a pint bottle and ill the bottle with syrup, using either lain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as de-sired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never

it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

But we are taught that death is a glorious victory for those who have lived the faith on earth. They shall awake in that home which the master promised to go and prepare.

The death of our friends and loved ones seems sometimes more than we can bear. Yet it has been said that "the sense of loss when a loved one is taken increases as the years go on, rather than grows less, and the mem-memorial hour"—what sad so would first, pay their tributes, and she called on Maj. W. P. McClatchey, formerly of Georgia, and who had known Mrs. Brown since her early childhood. He paid a beautiful tribute to the character and life of Mrs. Brown, speaking in part as follows:

Brown, speaking in part as follows:

"Every individual has faults, foibles, idiosyncracles, and short-comings. To overcome these, and short-comings. To overcome these, and support them with the life-giving principles and virtues taught by the man of Galilee is the acme of human life; and the success or failure of each individual in accomplishing this is the measure of the value of all human endeavors. We are assured by the Bible that: To him that overcometh will be given to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God. The same authority says: I know thy works, and charity, and service, and faith, and thy patience and the last to be more than the first. Judging the life and character of Mrs. Brown in the light of these declaration of the ruler of the unions, she is now 'eating of the tree of life in the midst of the paradise of God.' Mrs Brown suffered many trials and tribulations; and such as would shatter the faith of many persons of less mentality and firmness of character but she 'overcame' all, and came out of the firery furnace without the smell of fire on her garments,' and continued to let her light so shine, others seeing her good work glorified her father in heaven. Her deeds of charity and solicitude for the poor and the helpless are well-known to all. She loved the south, her traditions and glorious civilization. "She was the faithful friend of the of the dead Confederate soldiers, who sleep in unknown graves in our Confederate cemetery. Her heart and her purse were always open to the Confederate soldier, and many of them have been materially aided by her. She was the largest contributor toward the purchase of this Confederate memorial hall, and in addition to that by her will bequeathed another generous sum to aid in carrying out the purposes for which it was established. In connection with her contribution to funds for the purchase of this hall, an incident occurred that illustrates the character of this good woman; after making a generous contribution credited to my deceased sister, Miss Kate Fort. I know it would be her pleasure to contribute were she living. Thus showing a generous unselfishings that is both commendable and inspiring.

"We some times complain that our first substantial contribution and inspiring."

"We some filmes complain that our friends are prematurely and suddenly taken from us. In this we are mis-taken—God knows best.

"A child prematurely wise was com-plaining on a hot morning that the poor dewdrops had been too hastily snatched away, and not allowed to glisten on the flowers like other happier dew-drops that live the whole night through, and sparkled in the moon-light, and through the morning to noon-day.

"The sun," said the child, "has chased them away with his heat or swallowed them in his wrath." Soon after came rain and a rainbow, whereupon his father pointed upwards: "See," said he, "there stands your dew-drops gloriously reset as glistening jewelry in the heavens; and the clownish foot tramples on them no more. By this my child when art taught, that what withers upon earth blooms again in heaven." was hope; but when the last link was broken, and we realized we were never more to see her in the accustomed walks of life, nor to hear the cherry voice; never again to see her at the corner house or seen feeding the birds and working at her flowers. For she was an ardent lover of nature, and draw inspiration from the song of birds, and the musical rippling of brooks and the perfumed beauty of flowers. Never again to meet her in counsel at the home she helped to make and loved so well. Then the full sense of our loss was impressed upon us.

"She descended from a distinguished family in Georgia with an ancestry reaching back beyond colonial days. In her girlhood she was greatly admired and much sought after. Fearless and independent in thought and action, she feared no criticism.

Other feeling but brief tributes were spoken by Mrs. C. C. Nottingham, representing the French War Orphans; Mrs. Franklin Harris, of the D. A. K., Chickamauga chapter; Mrs. Francis Martin, of the U. D. club; Mrs. Clarence S. Steward, representing the Kosmos club, and Mrs. Richard Hardy, of the Educational Humane association. Mrs. Brown during life had taken a deep interest in each of these organizations. Mrs. Hardy told of how often Mrs. Brown used to visit the schools with her and how much interest she manifested in inculcating the love of animal life in the minds and hearts of the children. On the occasions of these visits Mrs. Brown, she said, took a great deal of pleasure in giving the children tests of writing the names c. animals in a period of five minutes.

Each of these ladies spoke in feeling terms of the great loss their respective clubs and organizations had sustained in the death of Mrs. Brown.

The exercises were then closed with benediction, pronounced by Dr. J. W. Bachman.

High Order of Intellect.

Mrs. Magili was then called upon and in a few brief words she paid a fitting eulosy to Mrs. Brown, especially speaking of the high order of culture she possessed and the wide range of her intellect and accomplishments, as a writer, a musician and an artist. She spoke feelingly of Mrs. Brown's love for birds and of her deep interest in education and all matters pertaining to the upitt of humanity. She spoke also of Mrs. Brown's refined nature and her universal kindness for the poor and her deep sympathy for humanity in general.

Gone Home.

Mrs. Foster V. Brown, when called upon, said in part:

"I am proud to be called a friend of Mrs. Brown. She was a woman of brilliant mind and great depth of soul and most generous heart, unselfish to a marked degree and, a patron of all enterprises that tended to the betterment of her fellowman. It seems to me that her death is an occasion of rejoicing, rather than sorroy, for she has gone to that place where her heart had been for years."

Memory Will Be Cherished.

Mrs. E. Dunbar Newell was the next speaker, and she read this tribute:

"Mrs. Frances Fort Brown has passed from our midst into the great beyond, but in her church, with her friends and in every organization of which she was a member will her memory be cherished and loved always. To all who touched her life closely she was a friend, to us who knew her, her loyalty and devotion to the causes she loved stund first in our minds; but the entire community knows and should appreciate all she advocated, worked for and accomplished in civic life, and for advancement along all lines. "Mrs. Brown was a wonderfully accomplished and talented woman, and I doubt if we assembled here could find one other as gifted in literature, music and art. No one who ever crossed the threshold of her living room could fall to notice her devotion to the old south and its heroes, and in her passing that south has lost a true and faithful daughter."

Mrs. W. Wheelock was unavoidably prevented from attending the services, but she sent a tribute which was read by Mrs. J. P. Hoskins.
This was as follows:
"Friend after friend departs.
Who has not lost a friend?
There is no union here of hearts,
That finds not here an end."
"Daughters of the Confederacy—Today we sit in the shadow of sorrow, for we have lost a friend, a generous, faithful friend, who forgave us our faults and loved us for the good she saw in everything."
"Her philosophy of life may be summed up in the words of the poet—"He prayeth best who loveth best.
All things, both great and small."
The birds were her neighbors, and she looked upon the animal world as really our "little brethren."
"To those less fortunate than herself she was a "friend in need;" not only did she look after the things useful and needful, but she planted the flowers; realizing a great love for the beautiful in her own mind, she enkindled the radiant glow in the world round about her.
"She loved knowledge because she bein her own mind, she enkindled the radiant glow in the world round about her.

"She loved knowledge because she believed in the persuit of it she was thinking after God."

"She loved her own dear southland, its manner and customs, particularly those of the old south, of which she was so fitting a type, and it is largely to her anxious care and generosity we owe the Confederate Memorial hall.

"Her patriotism found vent in active participation in the various organizations that stand for human betterment and civic improvement.

"She most intensely believed in the world invisible encompassing about this material, and that to souls in tune with the infinite there come notes from Divine harmony, with winged sandals shod, the angels come and go, the Messengers of God." "Let us comfort ourselves with the truth that 'love makes memory eternal, and that although she has gone out from among us, the sweet, lingering grace of her presence is forever ours, and that for our beloved friend there has come the realization of the wondrous reality of 'how beautiful it is to be with God; and that those she had 'loved and lost long since awhile' have but led her away out of our sight into the land of love and light eternal; and in the 'Sweet Bye and Bye' we too, shall 'go over the river and rest under the shade of the trees,' and know our own again."

Another absentes was Mrs. J. D. Kelso, but she too sent a tribute which was read by Mrs. Dayton as follows:
"To do even meager justice to a nature and personality like that of our own dear friend (Mrs. Brown), would demand a pen like Shakespear a tongue like Burns, or a spirit like Mrs. Browning, and I feel very deeply my own limitations.

limitations.

"I admired her, I honored her, I loved her. During the two years of my association with her as an assistant officer, and six years as a member of the same board—I was drawn into a close friendship which shall always be one of my most helpful and cherished memories.

"She was a type of genuine southern womanhood with the added quality that as the world progressed and grew in new and modern ideas, she kept pace with it and exercised a deep interest in human affairs and the march of world events. As so many have said the charm of her personality came largely through her interest in things outside of het.

"If true refinement and Christianity are shown in consideration of others then Mrs. Brown was indeed one of God's noble women. It would be superfluous for me to enumerate her many, qualities of mind and heart.

"My tribute is to ner stacious, and uplifting friendship. I. with all of you, shall sorely miss her stacious, helpful influences, but we are comforted in the faith and knowedge that she has only gone on before to the Heavenly home to which we are all traveling where God shall wipe all tears from our eyes.
